for my formula for becoming a booster. The best definition I ever heard of a booster is a man who will root when the home team is losing. But a booster has to be born—you can't make 'em up to order.

If you think you are cut out for a booster, you don't want any formula. Just go and find a place where the echo is strong and then holler out, "I am a booster" and the echo will come back strong and call you "booster." Then you must trade all you can with born boosters like my boss. Say? Of course you do.

GREEN BAY RY. CO. CONDEMNS

Green Bay &amp; Western Condemning a Portion of the Home-land of G. W. Paulus.

The Green Bay & Western Railroad has started condemnation proceedings against a portion of the homestead of Geo. Paulus in the Fifth ward. The hearing of the petition came up before Judge Park in Stevens Point on July 31, Mr. E. R. Groggins appearing for the railroad company and D. H. Grady of Portage representing the interests of Mr. Paulus in the case. On Friday last Judge Park rendered his decision of this hearing in favor of the railroad company.

We understand this is only the beginning of the battle as Mr. Paulus says he does not intend to be driven out of his home in such an unjust manner. The railroad desires the property as a home but the company will not take the whole property. He went so far as to be willing to fix the value of the home by arbitration. It is certainly a most fair concession on the part of Mr. Paulus.

Few men would be willing to sell their property at a value set by outside parties.

The railroad company on the other hand intends to take just what is needed and no more, and intends to use the strong arm of the law to that end.

The intention of the Railroad Company is to build a spur track from their main line through the Paulus homestead and connect with the paper mill tracks on the embankment. There is a general opinion prevalent that a railroad cannot take a man's private property for a sidewalk because the public receives no benefit, and the principle underlying the taking of private property is that it must be for a general benefit to the public.

If the railroad company succeeds in putting in this spur track it will make a dangerous crossing on Third Ave. North. This matter will be taken up by the council as it properly should be.

The fact is that the west side of our city is already out up too much by tracks and has too many railroad crossings. If there is any way to further prevent this it certainly should be done by the council. If our city should succeed in getting some more manufacturing plants we would soon be all out up by switches and tracks.

Why shouldn't all roads be compelled to go into a plant on one spur track instead of having four different spurs as in this case?

Bridge Whist Party.

Mrs. O. T. Hengen entertained about forty-five ladies at a bridge whist party on Monday afternoon in honor of Mrs. A. L. Hengen and Mrs. Otis Markon of Manitowish. It was pronounced by all as a very enjoyable party.

Mrs. F. W. Kruger was given a beautiful silver spoon, having won the first prize, much to her astonishment as she thought she couldn't play bridge.

Delicious refreshments were served. The ladies left for their homes with a feeling of gratitude to Mrs. Hengen for the delightful afternoon.

OBITUARIES

Joseph Corson Dies

Joseph Corson, who has been an inmate of the Wood County poor farm for several years, died at that place on Monday. He was a man of 75 years of age. His small cottage near the cemetery will be remembered. Its center walls and garden were decorated by wooden and stone images, some of which he brought from distant parts of the country. His place was a grotesque sight and visitors were often taken out there just to see his place. He told old stories about his wooden and stone gods just to give you an uneasy feeling. His remains will rest in the poor farm cemetery.

Death of Mrs. Julius Biron

Mrs. Julius Biron died at her home in Anson, Wash., last week. She died suddenly from heart trouble. Mrs. Biron lived in Grand Rapids the greater part of her life up to a dozen years ago when she moved out west. Her maiden name was Harriet Biron and a half sister to Alex and George Zenier, one of the oldest families in Grand Rapids. Those that knew Mrs. Biron speak of her in the highest terms as a woman of culture and refinement. Her body will be interred in the Lewiston, Washington, cemetery.

Death of Mrs. Ella Coon

News was received here of the death of Mrs. Ella McShane Coon in Seattle, Wash., on Aug. 3th. She lived here and at Port Edwards in her youth. She was married to Charles Coon of Marshfield and lived there for some time and later went out west.

Lost to Stevens Point.

The ball game at the ball park on Sunday resulted in a score of 11 to 2 in favor of Stevens Point. The home team, who has been going good, had a day off and the Point boys got to him in the second inning and rolled up seven tallies. Nelson came to the rescue, and pitched a good game, but the lead was too much to overcome, besides the Point team had their batting clothes on and hit him freely. At that, after the second, losing the game was a good one and there were several brilliant plays made on both sides.

While Grand Rapids lost the game, it was a good one and there were several brilliant plays made on both sides. The fact is that the west side of our city is already out up too much by tracks and has too many railroad crossings. If there is any way to further prevent this it certainly should be done by the council. ## Must Have a Reason.

Grand Rapids young people and especially girls of minor age, who have been in the habit of receiving their mail at the general delivery window of the postoffice will hereafter be deprived of this privilege unless they furnish some good excuse why they should get mail in this manner.

An order from Postmaster General Hitchcock instructs the local officials to insist in a written notice by prospective users of the window. These requests must have the name of the user and his address and specific reasons why it is necessary to receive mail in this manner. This does not include the traveling public it is understood.

Minors are required to furnish the names and addresses of their parents as well as their own names. The general delivery window was originally planned for transients and local people having no permanent address. In recent years the business of the window has grown very largely and a large part of it is known to be what is in postoffice circles as legitimate correspondence.

Young girls, corresponding with men and not wishing their parents to know of it, have become a nuisance at postoffices throughout the country. Men children send notes through the mail to be called for at the general delivery window.

The matter was brought to the attention of the authorities at Washington and after considering the matter the order was issued.

A Horrible Accident.

While switching for the Buffalo Bill Wild West show at Green Bay on Sunday last George Ratelle lost his life by having his head crushed between two freight cars while endeavoring to make a coupling.

The accident occurred at about 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Ratelle was immediately taken to the hospital but never regained consciousness. He died within fifteen hours of the accident.

While this was happening his wife was in this city visiting her mother, Mrs. A. B. Sutor and Mrs. W. R. Chambers, having just come from the city to spend some time visiting her relatives and old friends. When she received the news she made every effort to reach Green Bay as soon as possible, but he had passed away before she arrived.

George Ratelle was born in Grand Rapids about 48 years ago. He was the son of Frank Ratelle who had a livery stable for years on the west side. George was well educated for the O. & N. W. Ry. at Green Bay where he lived for some fifteen years. Mrs. Ratelle is a daughter of Louis Lyons of this city. She was born and raised in the town of Rudolph.

Deceased leaves a wife and two children, Clyde eighteen and Isabelle, sixteen years of age. The family have the sympathy of their friends in this sad hour of their affliction.

The funeral takes place Thursday morning. The body will be laid at rest in the cemetery at Green Bay.

Changed the Date.

Miss Mattie Hein of the Henshaw Conservatory of Chicago will give a piano and violin recital assisted by Miss Mabel Wedge of New York City, as vocalist, and Miss Evelyn Kneller of Danvers, a recent graduate of the above institution, at Daly's Opera House, Friday Aug. 23. These people were highly recommended and you are assured a musical treat. Tickets on sale at Daly's Drug Store, Monday.

The concert was postponed from the 21st to 23rd, as the 21st is Grand Rapids day at the Marshfield fair.

Heiser-Polansky.

On August 21st at eight o'clock in the forenoon the wedding ceremony was solemnized whereby Herman J. Heiser and Ella Minnie Polansky were united in holy matrimony. The ceremony took place at St. John's Lutheran church in Sigel, Rev. Gesehnau officiating.

This bride is the daughter of Edward Polansky and the groom a son of Herman Heiser, both of whom are well known in this locality.

The Merrill merchants have adopted a novel method of advertising the Lincoln County Fair. The automobile owners of that city on a certain day took a bunch of advertising matter and started in every direction and covered the whole county successfully and thoroughly. ## AGED MAN LOST NEAR HIS HOME

Not Found for About Two Days and Died Soon After.

Fred Giese, aged 88 years, who lives in the town of Grand Rapids about two and one quarter miles east from the city, wandered away from his home and was lost on Tuesday of last week. He lived with his aged wife on a farm near their son Gustav Giese. They are both feeble from age and are in the best of health. After dinner on that day Mr. Giese strolled away from the house, became confused and lost his way. Searching parties set out in every direction and it was thought at one time that he was drowned in the creek nearby. And although he had only stayed about thirty rods from the house yet it was over two days before he was found. The searching party had passed within several feet from where he was found. His whereabouts were not discovered until Thursday at about four o'clock in the afternoon. The good news was that he was found and was apparently dead. His clothes were wet and the exposed parts of the body as face, hands and arms were severely attacked by flies, mosquitoes and other insects. A call from his son was recognized by the father, and although he never spoke, a sign of recognition showed he was alive and conscious. He was taken to the home of his son and everything to alleviate his suffering was done. Friday morning at four o'clock he died.

What happened during those two days absence is only conjecture and how far he had wandered will be never known but that he suffered the severest mental and physical pains, pains and tortures is certain, and can hardly be imagined.

Fred Giese was born in Schwedt, Province, Magdeburg, Prussia on December 20th, 1828. He came to this country in 1880 going first to Milwaukee but shortly after locating in Grand Rapids. He was a mason by trade and had worked on many of the prominent buildings in town, including the court house. He purchased a farm east from the city and lived on it up to his death. He was a hard working man and was never known to have been sick a day in his life. His strength allowed him to work at his trade until he was 75 years old, showing the wonderful endurance with which nature endowed him.

He leaves a wife who is also 83 years, three sons Charles, Henry and Gustave and one daughter, Mrs. Chas. Eberle of the town of Saratoga.

The funeral services took place on Saturday afternoon at one o'clock at the home and at two o'clock at the St. John's Lutheran church in this city. Rev. Patz conducted the services. The remains were deposited in the family lot in Forest Hill cemetery.

Mr. Giese was a man of sterling qualities and of a kind heart. He was as well as on the cow. Some business men had willfully planned this cowardly deed and succeeded. That a human being can stoop so low and apparently get great pleasure and satisfaction in such an act is beyond our comprehension.

The law is very strict and rightly so for anyone who seeks to gain revenge for an imaginary and insignificant injury by inflicting suffering upon a poor dumb and helpless animal is the worst kind of a villain and coward. We hope the culprit will have the law applied to him.

Back to the Cranberry Marsh. T. W. Henderson has tendered his resignation to the Grand Rapids Milling Company the past week to accept the management of the Lester Cranberry Co's marsh about twelve miles southwest from town. O. O. Potter, its former manager, has purchased the marsh near Warren and has moved down there the past week to take immediate possession. Mr. Henderson has had considerable experience on marshes and formerly owned one half interest in the Rezin marsh. He is already looking after the company's interests, and has taken his family out on the marsh.

Schools to Open Sept. 2. The public schools of the city will open Monday, September 2, 1912. Gradings will be published next week. The City Superintendent will be in his office at the high school Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 28, 29 and 30th, 1912, for consultation with those who wish to see him at that time. Special and general teachers meetings will occupy the Superintendent's time on Saturday, August 31st.

Opening of County Normal. The Wood County Normal will open for regular work Tuesday, Sept. 3, 1912. The faculty will be at the building all day Monday to assist students in fitting places to board or to work for all or a part of the expense of board.

Those who do not hold certificates of admission may arrange for entrance Monday Sept. 2. [M. H. Jackson, Principal.

Wanted to Exchange. I have a fine 100 acre homestead in Stanley County, South Dakota, which I wish to exchange for a good residence property in Grand Rapids. This land is fine corn land. All can be plowed. Located 2 1/2 miles from Pierre. Address W. C. in care of Tribune, Grand Rapids, Wis.—22 p.

Remembered by Congregation. Members of the congregation of the Scandinavian Moravian church met at the parsonage and gave Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Johnson a reception on Saturday evening last week. The congregation showed their esteem for their pastor by presenting him with a purse of money as a wedding gift on this occasion.

A Freak of Lightning. Vesper Pioneer—A queer freak of lightning occurred at the Fredrickson farm during the last storm. The barn was struck and caught fire, but the heavy downpour of rain soon quenched it. Two pigs were killed back of the barn. A wire clothes line was fastened to the barn and the lightning passed along this to the granary where it did considerable damage. From here it went along another wire clothes line to the house where it killed a dog lying on the porch. No damage was done to the house.

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

My Friend at Bridge

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Melville Davisson Post

On the evening of the twenty-third of December I was one of a party at bridge at the residence of Baron Adolph von Hubert on Eighth-street. The baron was the American agent of the Berlin banking house of Weisskopf & Co. The charming Madame von Hubert was Sarah Lemart, the wealthiest debutante at Newport when the baron met her. A brilliant woman, who was vainly endeavoring to establish in New York a salon after those of Paris under the Empire. Perhaps I should have met almost everybody having any claim to distinction in the drawing rooms of Madame von Hubert.

The little party on this evening consisted of Madame von Hubert, the baron, Winfield Gerry and myself. Young Gerry, who went everywhere among the people of leisure, was taken to be a person of leisure. His brother, Marcus Gerry, was certainly one of the wealthiest men in New York. He was the largest stockholder, and financial director, of the Fifty-eighth National bank Winfield Gerry was under the impression that the baron was a fortune teller, and that he was a fortune teller.

I do not remember ever to have been so fortunate as to see him again. When we were at the table, I had won $500, of which sum the baron lost two hundred. The remainder was the loss of Winfield Gerry. I was glad of this distribution of the loss. Young Gerry was reputed an idle young fellow with millions at his finger tips.

The baron, keeping his money, like a fortune teller, handed me ten double-eagles. Mr. Gerry said that he would give me a check at the club, and asked me to ride down town with him in his carriage. We were scarcely seated before he turned to me and said, in a quiet, even voice, as though he were announcing a great event:

"I can't pay you, Mr. Parks."

I turned in astonishment to see if he was joking. The electric light in the carriage showed me a face distressingly drawn and tired. There was no pleasure behind that countenance. The solution came to me instantly. This man, posing as a gentleman, was in fact a cad, he was about to question the regularity of the game, the regularity of a friendly sitting at bridge in the house of such people as the von Huberts. I bristled with indignation.

"And may I inquire," I answered firmly, "why is it that you cannot pay me, Mr. Gerry?"

The man did not at once reply. He took a cigarette from his pocket, lighted it and leaned back on the cushions of the carriage.

"For the best reason in the world, Mr. Parks," he answered. "I have at this moment, to be entirely accurate, just two hundred and thirty-eight dollars and seventy-five cents."

I was greatly relieved. "My dear sir," I laughed, "do not expect you to carry about a cash drawer. I knew as a gentleman once who carried a cash drawer, and who did not have a shilling in his pocket from one year's end to the other. I should be glad of your check. I should be glad of any."

"You are alone there," he said simply.

My annoyance returned. I detest passages at bridge. "I detest passages at bridge," I said, "but you will permit me to understand you."

Gerry took his cigarette from his mouth, ground the lighted end against the panel of the carriage and threw it on the floor.

"It would be better, I have no doubt, to be looking me evenly in the face. I have not intended to be either obscure or facetious. The sum which I have just mentioned represents all the money that I have in the world. My reputation for wealth is a mere shell, exclusive of this little debt to you. Stable and tailor bills, various club dues, run fifteen hundred more. I owe twelve hundred in overdrafts. It is near a hundred thousand, you see. Against this, I have perhaps five hundred dollars of personal effects, horses worth thirty-five hundred and a bundle of worthless stocks. I am beastly poor, atrociously poor, you see, Mr. Parks."

I listened in astonishment.

"You will doubtless put me down a cad," he went on. "To join a game of bridge when I had not the money to tend to play. In fact, I did not intend to make my excuses to the baroness and depart. I found this politely impossible, and I sat down to the cards, hoping that two or three hundred dollars would cover my proportion of probable loss." He paused and made a deprecating gesture. "I was no idle fancy of the ancients to picture fortune a woman. I might have known."

Then he stopped, stripped off his gloves, took out a pocket watch, removed two rings, unhooked a jewel from his tie, and before I realized what he was doing, handed them all to me. I put back his hand. He thrust the articles into his waistcoat pocket and dropped his hand on his knee.

Randolph Mason would even hear his story to the end. I had no hope of his assistance for young Gerry; his case had none of the elements of uncorrected injustice, bringing it within Mason's zone of interest. I expected to see Mason search him mercilessly for a moment, and then drop him as a prospector would a worthless nugget.

Young Gerry entered and remained standing by one of the bookcases near the table. Mason looked at him carefully for a moment; then he said, "How much do you owe?"

Winfield Gerry glanced quickly at me. I measured him with a nod at me. I answered, "In round numbers, one hundred thousand dollars."

"For what?" said Mason.

"Borrowed money," replied Gerry.

"For what?" Mason repeated.

The young man hesitated; then he said, "I am tempted to be rather reckless where money matters are concerned. Horses that are too fast; usually an explanation is required to go no further."

"I could readily see that he was hoping to evade his query," said Mason.

"What is the truth about it?" said Young Gerry, shifted his feet nervously. "Well," he began weakly, "won't that do for an explanation? How can it matter, anyway? The money is gone."

Mason continued monotonously to repeat his question. The young man seemed to go through that period of uncertainty and hesitation common to the court witness who finds himself forced by the examiner either to make a clean breast of his story or submit and looked curiously about him at the rows of bookcases along the wall, the oriental rug on the floor, the scattered volumes on the table, quite as if Randolph Mason had walked out of the room. Then he turned to me and said, "He is a cad, a cad, a cad."

"Are you related to Marcus Gerry?" said Mason.

The young man crossed the floor and sat down in a chair. "He is my brother," he replied.

"Then," said Mason, "this thing is child's play."

The old listless cloud settled again over Winfield Gerry's face. "Mr. Mason," he said, "there is no hope in me. I am a practical person. When one gets a dollar from Marcus Gerry, he leaves two in unquestioned securities until he comes back with the loan. His instincts are those of a banker; he does not misunderstand me. My brother would promptly knock down the man who assailed my name in his presence. He would go up to the door of state's prison to crush my enemy. He would grind every moral precept into pulp to pull me out of a hole, but he would not pay out a hundred dollars, nor one dollar, to wipe out this debt which I have assumed. I have gone over this matter more than once with him. He is lying in wait for Egan Bedford. He is lying in wait for Egan Bedford."

In the world to be taken for a fool. He would not cash checks on the Fifty-eighth National bank. No one would cash checks on the Fifty-eighth National bank. No one would cash checks on the Fifty-eighth National bank.

"The two men at the window turned around in their chairs. Egan Bedford arose, came over to the table and put down a pack of checks. "I do not see why the bank sends me to a law office," he said. "I want the money on these checks."

"I believe," said Mr. Stratton, "that the Fifty-eighth National bank would not deposit upon which these checks could be drawn."

A light of cunning came into Egan Bedford's face. "I know that," he said, "but the bank is better than any man's account. I made the bank stand good for the checks."

"Then," said Stratton, "I thought there was the faintest shadow of a smile fitting about the corners of his eyes."

Bedford's broad face lighted with victory. He thrust his hand into the bosom of his coat, took out a letter and a telegram and placed them on the table. "There," he said, "is the bank's guarantee in black and white and yellow." Then he added, with a sneer, "I guess your bank's not broke; is it?"

The lawyer moved some papers under him and found a printed statement. "The bank," he said, "has assets valued at thirty-five millions of dollars, and its liabilities are some ten millions. That would be, I believe, twenty-five millions above insolvency. Is it?"

"Then," said Bedford, "I want my money."

"Doubtless," replied Stratton.

Bedford exploded with anger. "I am tired of this confounded nonsense," he shouted. "If the bank won't pay these checks, I will sue it."

"Then you will lose," replied the lawyer quietly.

"Lose?" cried Bedford. "The bank guaranteed these checks. I tell you. There is the guarantee; don't you see it?" and he pushed the papers across the table with his fat hand.

"I see it," said the lawyer; "but it is not worth filing a suit for."

"That," he shouted at Bedford.

"My guarantee of the Fifty-eighth National bank," continued Stratton, "is utterly void."

Bedford plunged back on his heels like a man struck violently in the breast. He waved his fat arm at his counsel, whom he hitherto had ignored. "Judge," he shouted, "judge, judge, judge!"

Judge Hacker, whose knowledge of the law is said to equal that of any practitioner in New York, arose and came over to the table. He nodded to us, then he spoke quietly to his confederate in the law.

"Stratton," he said, "give me a moment to look at this matter."

Coleman Stratton touched an electric button, scribbled a memorandum on a scrap of paper and handed it to the officer who had entered. Then he turned to Judge Hacker.

SAVED FROM RUIN

Undermining of Winchester Cathedral Stopped by Cement.

For Many Years the Historic Building Has Been Cracking, Bulging and Settling, Threatening to Collapse Completely.

London.—After a period of eight centuries, Winchester cathedral now rests on a solid and immovable foundation, saved from threatened ruin by the successful issue of the underpinning of the choir and transept. The cathedral has been watched with curious interest as it entered or emerged from the water beneath the foundations of the cathedral. It was at work helping to save from ruin one of England's noblest historic buildings, and the successful issue of the underpinning has been celebrated by a thanksgiving service in the cathedral.

For several years the dean and chapter of Winchester had been watching ominous signs, such as cracks, bulging and settlements, sure harbingers of a collapse of the cathedral. From the interior daylight could be seen through the cracks, the latter grew ever wider and wider. The walls on the south side and the Norman transepts, hinged for their majestic simplicity, were given in all directions.

The massive masonry of the Norman builders had from the beginning proved too ponderous for the water, compressible soil which forms the foundation.

The first hole dug into the foundation revealed the cause of the whole trouble—water—water and acting on expert advice, holes were dug in sections through the top soil and chalk and far through the peat. Then it was the work of the driver in his usual diving dress to enter the hole, remove the water, and so on, so as to allow the water to rise into the cavity, and then to lay a flooring of cement to prevent the water from sliding back into the gravel. After the unpurged water had been removed by pumping the cavity was filled up with bitulose in concrete. This extended from the floor to the roof.

BADGER NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Phillips—Editor George D. Young of the Park Falls Herald was drowned in Butternut lake. He was fishing from a towboat in company with A. B. Kaiser of Park Falls when the boat capsized, throwing both into the water. Kaiser was saved by swimming to shore. Young's body was recovered.

Ranger—The woman was short, the dog little and the snake long. Mrs. M. Shori was called by the franchise of her dog, and when she reached the porch she saw a large snake approaching her small son, who was playing in the yard. She wielded her umbrella so effectively that the reptile turned up its toes in self-defense. The snake measured five feet and two inches. Next day her brother-in-law, Mrs. George Shori, killed a snake even longer while picking berries. It measured five feet eleven inches.

Kenosha—"I am just going to the down in bed and die," said Samuel Spivey, a Kenosha man, and a few minutes later he was found still and dead. Spivey had been in bed for some time, but when he started for the bathroom he fell and broke his neck. He was going to die. They considered him a martyr and called a physician, but Spivey was dead when the doctor arrived. Physicians stated that his death was due to a fatal heart trouble.

Madison—By appointment of Governor McFarland, Senator Henry Ramsey, Plymouth; Senator Paul O. Hastings, Mayville; William Irvine, Clippewa Falls; W. O. Hotchkiss and Clinton J. Steward, Madison, will represent Wisconsin at the conference of the Mississippi Valley Improvement association at Chicago on August 20.

Platteville—Roy Norris, thirty-three years old, son of J. L. Norris, a lawyer, shot himself. He had been drinking heavily when he committed the act. He went into a hay loft, fastened his necktie to the trigger of a shotgun and fired. His wound nearly blew out his head. Norris had served in the Spanish war.

Winconsin Veterans' Home.—The Camp Cleghorn summer assembly, which closed its sessions, has been very successful financially and otherwise. The attendance upon the grounds was about 1,000. Many improvements are contemplated in the buildings and on the grounds for another year.

Eldora—An unsuccessful attempt to blow up the Eldora mill dam by dynamite was unavailing here by a falling party. The dynamite of 60 per cent strength, well packed in a tin that had been lowered by means of a block and tackle into the water alongside the dam.

Kenosha—A. W. Anderson has returned from Kansas City, where he was elected a member of the board of directors of the National Jewish association. Mr. Anderson is secretary of the Wisconsin state association.

Madison.—In a statement filed, the Wisconsin Women's Suffrage association showed disbursements of $1,061.74, of which $752.77 was previously reported. The total contribution was $1,227.66, of which $1,100 was from the National Women's Suffrage association and $127.66 from the Wisconsin Equal Suffrage league showed disbursements of $621.24; Congressional James H. Davidson, John J. Egan, La Crosse, $128.50, of which $200 was spent for his election in the primary election pamphlet.

Kenosha.—Kenosha's first Jewish synagogue, the temple B'nai Zerkah, was dedicated and a number of members of the faith from Chicago, Milwaukee and other cities. The principal addresses were made by Rev. J. Rappaport and Rev. S. Silber of Chicago and Judge Joseph R. Clark of Kenosha. Fully 1,000 persons attended the services. Sunday night and a great number of the Jewish people of Kenosha and the surrounding cities were held.

Madison.—Statistics compiled by the state board of health show that the death rate in Wisconsin is 105 per 1,000, as against 1,000 in the infant mortality rate has caused the board of health to the publication of a bulletin which will be distributed throughout the state setting forth the proper method of feeding and bathing infants. Over 2,000 children as a result of infection following birth.

Marshfield.—A two-month-old calf was killed by a large gander on a farm near here. The gander bent its prostrate form with its wings till the flesh was nearly eaten. The calf, the gander recently attacked a child. The calf was driven off by members of the family.

Green Bay.—The launch Spauld, owned by Jules Cavenberg, of Green Bay, was destroyed by fire following a gas explosion. The launch, owned and family, with several friends, escaped with being injured.

Green Bay.—Fire destroyed the Duteck Roofing box factory at De Mark, causing a loss of $20,000. The fire is believed to have been started by a cigarette which was thrown into the building. There being no fire protection in the village, the industry was wiped out. The owners carried little insurance.

Grand Rapids.—The Central Wisconsin fair will be held at Marshfield, Wis., from August 20-23. Two features will be an aeroplane meet and a final series of baseball games between Grand Rapids and Stevens Point for a purse of $750.

Racine.—A coat and hat were found near the factory of the Case Treadling machine company. A gold watch and chain, five dollars in currency, emblems of the Catholic Order of Foresters and a letter. It is thought a man may have committed suicide.

Fond du Lac.—The twelfth annual convention of the Wisconsin Retail Grocers and General Merchants association opened here. The Racine and Milwaukee delegations came on special trains.

Washington.—Baseball fever in Washington has invaded the Catholic pulpit. Sermons in the cathedrals of St. Matthew and St. Peter were given by two preachers recently.

BREAKING AWAY FROM TRUTH

Two Opinions With Respect to a False Statement Minister Admits He Made.

A curiously interesting question of ethics has arisen over the failure of a minister to secure employment. The minister, who is a man of good character, had been on the point of getting for her the work she needed in order to make an honest living and to regain the moral equilibrium which had been disturbed by her wrongdoing. But as soon as the minister, in his devotion to the strict letter of the truth, admitted that the woman had sinned, the doors of honest living were closed. The minister was in a position to lead a helping hand refusing to run the risk of "contamination," unwilling to follow the example of him who said to another erring woman: "Go and sin no more."

Now a rather lively local discussion has arisen as to whether the minister was justified under the circumstances, or whether anybody is ever justified under any circumstances, in telling a minister really lied at all he strained the truth in a good cause and that the imposition practiced upon those who refused to give to another the chance of reform which they themselves would have welcomed in their own case was intended to save a humane purpose. All who are inclined to take an ultra conservative view of the inviolability of truth, might ponder the words of Dickens when he wrote Tom Pinch and the lie that he did only good to another human being.

"There are some falsehoods, Tom, on which men mount, as on bright wings, to heaven. There are truths, cold, bitter, taunting truths, in which men dabble, and which would not let them have to fan him in his dying hour the lightest feather of a false hood such as this, than all the falseness."

Grand Rapids, Wis., Aug. 6, 1912.

To the Honorable Mayor and Common Council of the City of Grand Rapids, Wood County, Wisconsin.

We, the undersigned members of the Board of Public Works, to whom was referred the matter of special as-essment of abutting property owners for all water mains hereafter to be laid, beg leave to report as follows:

Proposed special assessments on Oak street, Baker street and Washington avenue was duly advertised last July for objections, July 19, 1912.

Testimony was taken before your board which is submitted herewith.

From all the testimony your board would recommend:

1. That no special assessments be levied on any mains now in the course of being laid for the reason that petitioners for such mains had no notice of such proposed assessment at the time they signed petitions.

2. That from and after January

1, 1913, all abutting property owners pay two-thirds of cost for extension of water mains to be laid. This date is set far enough ahead to give all petitioners ample notice of proposed change in policy.

3. That no more petitions for laying water mains be granted this year.

Respectfully submitted by your

Board of Public Works.

What To Do With The Boys.

Contributed.

Mr. Editor:

The community has been shocked by the news given by your valuable paper in its last two issues. One catastrophe has followed another, and the very foundation of our society of social law and order were threatened.

Man distinguished from other animals

by his reason, uses very little of it.

The interests involved in this class are those of the dominant class. The class now ruling is that possessing the wealth.

Let us see how the ethics of this class based on interest, work to the detriment of the working classes.

In the first place, therefore the human race is divided into two classes. The father should not produce children to take his place in the mine, mill, or factory. The working class must not accept the advice or assistance of a physician, lawyer, or any other person who is not a member of the class. The class now ruling is that which has the most power.

Another member of this capitalist class provides amusement for the working class by means of the social clubs, saloons, pool rooms, and dance halls, pandering to vice to enlarge profits.

There seems to be no body looking after the boy excepting those who take his labor power and money.

The class, who exploit the youth, expect the parents to assume the responsibility of the youth's conduct, when they are economically unable.

If all the children were deaf, dumb and blind we would have no difficulty in passing laws to protect them. But that a child who is passing through great constitutional changes, suffering from restraint of natural impulses, exhausted from hard work, and conditions and environment, is perverted, is not to be wondered at.

What is the remedy?

Fundamentally it is the self-conscious organization of the working class to secure the public ownership of the means of production and distribution.

This thought we cannot do without the opposition of the interests. As reforms we can offer the solicitation of a portion of the surplus value, given him that he may feel able earlier to assume the responsibilities of married life.

We would solicit a portion of the creation of a Y. M. C. A. building and subscriptions solicited at the city. If we remember correctly a certain lady agreed to erect a suitable building if enough members of the city could be secured to maintain the yearly expense of keeping up such a building and equipment but the year or two will be the first and make some sacrifices to have them in the organization and enjoy the benefits of the equipment and entertainments and classes. Boys and normal human beings are socially cloned and must have a place and of the highest order. "Top the boy's mind is very active and to keep away the bad and vicious thoughts, and be crowded, higher ideals and ambitions along worthy lines and endeavor.

Every once and in a while our community is shocked by some of our youth going wrong. Do what we can to go wrong, but this is certain that the cases would be very few among boys that can be induced to believe in an interest in a Y. M. C. A.

When we think of the luxuries wasted in all kinds of the least satisfying of desires and the least it seems queer that people should be so selfish to deny themselves a few of these for the benefit of the growing youth and for the moral elevation of themselves.

worked his way up to a good position and for some years had been in receipt of a splendid salary.

He had the confidence and respect of his employers. They decided to take him into the firm on condition that he make an investment of $1,500. It was a big opportunity for this young man—a chance of a lifetime.

Imagine his regret when he stood before his employers and confessed that he had saved no money but had spent his salary as he had received it—filleted it away.

Needless to say, he didn't get the partnership.

Don't let opportunity find YOU unprepared. Open a Savings Account here to-day—a dollar is all you need.

Cockney Pronunciation Left the Traveler Puzzled Until He Interviewed the Captain.

In the days when pocket ships ran between New York and London a youthful passenger asked the English mate of the Christianina what there was in the leather tubing around the gunwales of the Hibernia.

"Hair, sir," he answered.

There was hair in the Libbeos to make them capsize." "Ah!" answered the captain. "He's a Cockney; he's a Cockney!"
